Call for Presentations

The theme of the conference is "Systems Engineering – Sharing the Lessons Learned". By sharing lessons learned, the cost of acquiring and maintaining the systems that underpin our 21st century civilization can be reduced. The conference will take the form of invited and submitted presentations highlighting real world systems engineering experience.

Presentations are invited from practitioners of systems engineering who wish to share their experience in all areas of systems engineering and new product design and development. Further information about the conference can be found at <http://www.cedisc.com/APSEC-ADL.html>

We are designing this conference to provide new types of opportunities for sharing knowledge and exploring the application of technology to conferences and symposia. Consequently, we encourage submissions in the following categories:

- Submission for publication and presentation in person at the symposium (this is the traditional category and presenters are required to register and attend the conference).
- Submission for publication only (author is not required to attend).
- Submission for publication and presentation via distance mode presentation (author will submit PowerPoint slides, and make the presentation using the telephone).

SUBMISSION OF DRAFT PRESENTATIONS: Please follow instructions in <http://www.seecforum.unisa.edu.au/SSES2007>

Draft presentations are to be submitted electronically in Microsoft PowerPoint format. Joint authors must nominate a single point of contact. Final versions of accepted presentations will be published in the CD ROM Proceedings of the Conference.

Please indicate when submitting your presentation which category you wish to enter.
